Community Living Campaign 415-821-1003 www.sfcommunityliving.org

Organizational History and Overview:

The Community Living Campaign was launched in late 2006 to develop effective ways to link formal health and social services with informal support networks to benefit the growing number of elders and persons with disabilities in San Francisco. The Community Living Campaign uses the power of relationships to reduce isolation and to eliminate barriers to aging in community. We do this by strengthening networks of support for individuals and across neighborhoods – networks that promote acts of kindness and a spirit of justice. We teach people how technology and social media are new tools to help individuals and organizations better reach their goals.

Strategy for Success – Social Networks:

The Community Living Campaign builds small communities of caring friends – social networks – that engage older adults and persons with disabilities and enable them to live in communities where everyone is valued and everyone is called to contribute.

- People who choose to join a network do so, not as volunteers, but rather as friends.
- Unlike social agencies that start with a long list of needs, social networks celebrate, draw inspiration from and organize around the dreams, interests and gifts of those at its heart. Each person in the network benefits from being involved; the ties that bind are reciprocal. Social networks support us all to age in community.
- Isolation has been shown to have real, lasting negative physical and mental health consequences. Fortunately, the reverse is also true: leading a compassionate and engaging life improves health and well-being.

Community Living Campaign Programs and Activities:

Community Networks: CLC's paid Community Connectors organize neighborhood-wide networks in several neighborhoods, including the OMI and Parkmerced and St. Francis Square/Western Addition. These networks reweave communities of support focusing on food delivery, home repairs, healthy aging and breast cancer support, social and advocacy activities.

Personal Individual Support Networks: Community Connectors and trained volunteers strengthen networks of friends, family and neighbors to help individuals with practical support and promote continued contribution.

Social Media: CLC has been an active partner in the development of on-line networks and a leader in the use of social media with seniors. CLC is partnering the Dept. of Aging and Adult Services and other community agencies to get more seniors on-line through trainings at senior centers, libraries and other community sites.

Community Convening: CLC were funded to organize and staff several large City-wide events, including the Alzheimer's and Dementia Summit in 2009, the Healthy Aging Summit in 2010 and the most recent Aging and Disability Technology Summit on May 15, 2012 at City Hall with over 600 participants.

Public Policy and Advocacy: CLC staff and leaders are active participants in the San Francisco Long Term Care Coordinating Council and on-going advocacy efforts to improving services and supports for seniors, persons with disabilities and their hands-on care providers.
