Tours

Byron Seeds

Byron Seeds, LLC specializes in high quality forage for the dairy and livestock industries. Owned by Samuel Fisher and Amos Glick, Byron Seeds has been serving the agricultural industry in ten Mid-west states since the mid 1990's. "We're an education-based company," is a favorite saying of Samuel's. More than supplying seed to farmers, Byron's is teaching farming methods that build and improve soil, creating a farm management system that is sustainable as well as profitable. Byron's concern is preparing the American agricultural industry for the emerging global economy.

Springbrook Farms

Springbrook Farms is owned by Mike Jones and his wife Barbara and sons Todd and Rod. They are presently milking 120 registered Holsteins w/ a BAA of 109.2 and raising replacement heifers. They also farm 3700 acres. Mike was recently elected to the Board of Directors of Holstein USA at their national meeting in Virginia.

Elanco Plant

Elanco develops and delivers proven products and services that enhance animal health, wellness and performance to help the food industry produce an abundant supply of safe, nutritious and affordable food. The Clinton Laboratories facility manufactures industry-leading products for cattle, poultry and swine, including Rumensin. Elanco is a global research-based animal health company and a division of Eli Lilly and Company.

Educational Program

Tour hosts will have the opportunity to discuss what is new in their companies and topics that affect dairy producers and the cows they work with. IPDP will also provide an update on news affecting dairy farms in Indiana.

Parke County Covered Bridge

We will stop by one of Parke County's glorious covered bridges on the return trip back to Byron Seeds.
