News Report: Clean up Australia says people who wash their cars on the street or on their driveways are sending tonnes of dangerous chemicals into the drainage systems. The organisation is launching an education campaign on the Gold Coast today to save Queensland's waterways and marine life from toxic stormwater. A Clean up Australia spokesperson comments on the amount discharged each year.

Interview: Ian Kiernan, Chairman and Founder of Clean Up Australia joins the program to promote awareness about the dangers of chemicals being sent to the environment from people washing their cars. Kiernan also notes the dangers of chemicals entering the waterways, which could potentially affect marine life, which extends to the human food source. He mentions that washing your car in the street in Queensland is illegal. Kiernan says we are in a global fresh water crisis and water management needs more attention.
