

School Lunches at MCMS

Sam Eckert

When you think of school lunches you think of gross food like mystery meat in the television shows. “But, at Medea Creek everything we serve is whole is whole wheat and we always serve fruit,” said Mary s. But, whole grain doesn’t mean gross food, it means healthy food. Annette Goulak and Melissa Vetti both like pick up sticks, pizza, and spicy chicken burgers. They both want more pizza, spicy chicken burgers and munchies. The bad thing about MCMS school lunches is that they hate having to wait in the long lines at lunch and watching others students cut in line. They also want some more varieties at school for lunch. Most students want the cafeteria to serve less veggie burgers. 6th graders Morgan Snyder and Will Hedlund both like middle school lunches better than their old elementary school because there is more variety to eat, shorter lines, and they like the snack shack. But, they both do not like the veggie burgers and sometimes they have to eat at dirty lunch tables. 8th graders Melissa Vetti and Annette Goulak and 6th graders Morgan Snyder and Will Hedlund want MCMS to serve Panda Express, In n Out, and bean and cheese burritos. Overall, they all think that MCMS has a good system of paying for lunches, like most food they serve, and will keep buying lunches at MCMS.
