

Open House

Students are working hard, parents are anxious, teachers are smiling... sound familiar? Of course it does. It's Open House. Another year of successful open house comes again, with every one trying hard to make yet another great open house. To truly understand, I questioned some passerbys. How do you feel about open house? I ask students.

Jason Paras replies, "Well, I feel as if open house is a testing of my skills, like it's the final strain on my abilities."

As Jason said, students are trying hard to improve any mistakes they made throughout the year.

The teachers had a quite different answer, "I think the days at open house are a little like what I expected. Because I know that they can do anything they put their mind to." Isn't that the truth!

Parents also have been preparing for this event. "Like all normal parents, I am a bit nervous at what I will find. But at the same time, it excites me."

Well there you have it. Every one is working, anxiously awaiting the day of Open House.
