

Ross University School of Medicine Seeks Senior Associate Dean for the Dominica Campus

Senior Associate Dean, Dominica Campus
Ross University School of Medicine
Dominica, West Indies, Caribbean

Founded in 1978, RUSM offers a Doctor of Medicine (MD) degree program and has graduated more than 8,500 physicians during its 34-year history, 98% of whom are US or Canadian residents. Graduates are eligible for licensure in all 50 States, Canada and Puerto Rico after the successful completion of the requisite licensing examinations.

Reporting to the Dean, the Senior Associate Dean is the senior-most administrator on Dominica and is responsible for advancing the quality and excellence of the first four semesters of medical education and leads the campus team by encouraging and fostering an environment that recruits, supports and develops faculty who are dedicated to medical education.

Key responsibilities include:

- Fostering assessment of students that promotes optimal academic achievement as measured by external and internal markers
- Encouraging research in medical education and public health
- Meeting the challenges of medical education innovation needed for preparation of students for licensure examination, residency training, and clinical practice

Qualifications

- Extensive managerial experience in an accredited medical school at the level of Dean, Associate/Assistant/Regional Dean or Chair of a large department
- Experience in higher education or medical education system required, with demonstrated intellectual leadership and vision
- Extensive experience in teaching students and mentoring faculty members
- Demonstrated skill in organizational administrative functions and allocation of resources along with a strong record of leadership at the higher education
- Candidates must possess an M.D., Ph.D, Ed.D or equivalent degree. An advanced degree or specialty certification in administration or higher education management is preferred, but not required
