National Domestic Violence committee gets a Delaware voice

By LeAnne Matlach

Updated Monday, November 29, 2010 - 8:33pm

Carol Post, a local leader in stopping violence against women, has been nominated by U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder to a two year post on a National Domestic Violence Committee.

Post is currently the Executive Director of the Delaware Coalition Against Domestic Violence. The coalition is a non-profit organization made up of domestic violence agencies providing direct services to adult victims of domestic violence.

For her new position with the new National Advisory Committee on Violence Against Women Post will begin meeting with the committee early next year.
