

ALGONQUIN WINTER WILDLIFE TRACKING

Join White Pine Programs on it's 13th Annual Winter Wildlife Tracking trip to scenic & Wild Algonquin Provincial Park.

Over the past decade, White Pine Programs, a unique nature-based learning organization from Maine, has developed a relationship with the Wildlife Research Station, a well-known field science facility located in the heart of Algonquin Park. As a result, we're able to offer this unique educational expedition that focuses on wildlife tracking, winter ecology, and nature connection.

To see a photo weblog of previous trips, click here.

The goals of the trip are to immerse participants in a tracking culture. Each day, we scout for track & sign, make a plan, then track & trail wildlife all day in small groups. At the end of the day, we unwind, eat hearty meals, and share the story of the day, all the while making hypotheses as to the movements and interactions of the animals we track and trail.

Over the past 12 years, we've tracked & trailed: Eastern Wolf, American Marten, Fisher, River Otter, Red Fox, Snowshoe Hare, Moose, White-Tailed Deer, Long and Short-Tailed Weasels, Mink, Ruffed Grouse, and more.

Topics Studied include: track identification, sign identification, trailing, trail interpretation, trail patterns vs. gaits, predictive trailing, winter birding, bird language, kill site analysis, and more.

Contribute to Science: Each year, we coordinate our efforts with those of various researchers in the park and serve as a data collection team- contributing to interesting studies. Past courses have collected data for studies on: Eastern Wolves, Moose, Fisher, Flying Squirrels, American Marten, & Gray Jays.

We only take 10 participants on this journey. Such small groups facilitate quality tracking time in the field and around the dinner table at night. The Staff is led by Dan Gardoqui and Alexis Burnett

To Register:

Register online by clicking here or call 207-361-1911 today. There are only 10 spaces.

DATES: Sunday Feb. 19 - Friday, Feb. 24 2012

COST: $695 USD (includes food, & lodging)

For more Details: Contact Dan Gardoqui - dan@whitepineprograms.org

Read the Reviews....

"This was a wonderful week. Small groups, excellent leadership, and exciting animal tracks wherever we looked. I could've stayed another week!" -2004 Participant

"Everyone was so supportive – the instructors & the group. It doesn't matter where you are on your journey...beginner or experienced... you feel comfortable." -2002 Participant

"The Algonquin Tracking trip is unbelievably rich with learning experiences – inside and out." -2008 Participant