

BENEFITS OF MYRRH

The therapeutic properties of Myrrh have been researched and studied for more than 3,000 years. It has been successfully used in Chinese, Ayurvedic, and Western Medicine, and its known uses and benefits are extensive. Myrrh has been proven and documented by well-known doctors and scientists for generations, including present day studies recently done at the Florence University in Italy.

Myrrh has been found to be:

Both Anti Bacterial and Anti Viral - Myrrh prohibits the growth of health-destroying microbes. It can be used against any ailment caused by microbial infection such as fever, food poisoning, coughs & colds, mumps, measles, pox, and all kinds of infection. Unlike other antibiotics that can cause weakening of the liver, digestion problems, etc, myrrh has no known harmful side-effects.

A powerful Astringent - Myrrh oil is often used as an astringent to strengthen the gums and teeth, to enhance skin toning, and to tone the body's muscles and internal organs. It strengthens the hair, scalp, and hair follicles, and has been known to help prevent hair loss.

A reliable Expectorant - Myrrh facilitates the secretion and expulsion of mucus and phlegm from the respiratory tract. It fights viral infections that cause coughs & colds and eases congestion of the lungs.

Anti-fungal - Myrrh can be used externally to treat certain fungal infections such as athlete's foot or fungal nail disease, and is also sometimes used internally to fight fungal spore growth in the body.

A reliable Stimulant - Myrrh oil stimulates blood circulation and increases bodily secretions to aid in the digestion and bile excretion process. It enhances the pumping action of the heart, as well as acts to promote wakefulness and alertness by stimulating the brain and the nervous system.

A helpful Carminative - Myrrh has been used to alleviate stomach gas pain by preventing the formation of gas in the gastrointestinal tract or by aiding in the expulsion of gas, thus alleviating stomach aches, headaches, and other gas causing symptoms.

A Diaphoretic - Myrrh increases the production of sweat and helps the body to expel toxins, excess body salts, and fluid build-up in the body. By increasing sweat production, myrrh cleanses skin-pores and helps harmful gases, such as nitrogen, escape.

A powerful Anti Septic - Myrrh is widely used for protection from infection and for the healing of cuts and wounds.

An Immune Booster - Myrrh strengthens and enhances the immune system to protect the body from infections of all kinds.

An Aid for Circulation - Myrrh stimulates healthy blood circulation to ensure a proper supply of oxygen to the cells and bodily tissue.
