Baril Corporation announces hiring of Neil Muchin to lead business development efforts

Industry veteran brings 15+ years of medical and industrial converting experience to Baril team

Haverhill, MA December 5, 2011 — Baril Corporation announced today that it has hired industry veteran Neil Muchin as Strategic Business Development Manager. Muchin's responsibilities will include strategic account relationships and new market development.

Muchin joins Baril Corporation after an extensive career in the medical and industrial converting business. From 1995 to 2000, he held various sales and marketing roles and helped build Acutek, Inc. into an industry leader, helping to position it for acquisition by Scapa PLC. He subsequently held senior National Accounts, Sales Management and Market Development roles with Scapa in the U.S. and Europe.

Daniel Baril, President of Baril Corp., commented, "We are thrilled to have someone of Neil's caliber join Baril Corporation. He is a well-respected expert in the medical converting field, and we look forward to having him serve our growing customer base going forward."

"Having spent more than 15 years in the medical converting industry, I know the landscape well and Baril Corp. has clearly distinguished itself from the rest of the field. The opportunity to join a company with the resources and track-record that Baril offers was a perfect fit," said Muchin.

“I am especially excited to leverage the full range of Baril expertise – from concept through commercialization. The breadth and depth of the tools available is unmatched in the industry.”

Muchin will be based in Oakland, California.
